

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

An interactive device, such as a toy, equipped with an image similarity engine capable of receiving external visual inputs and providing corresponding physical outputs. The device captures an image, compares the captured image with images stored in a database, and provides physical outputs according to the recognized images.